

The Tools to Choose

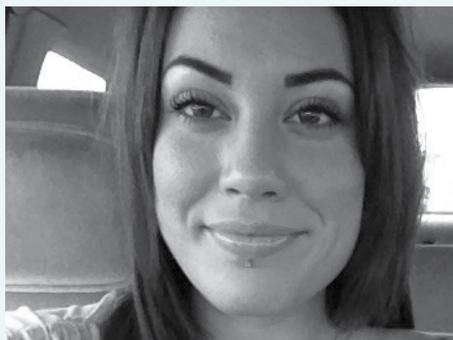

There are two sides to every story. This is the story of Jerika's experience at Patch from her own perspective. To read her mom's view, go to page 8.

I was 16 when my mom and stepdad tricked me into getting into the car. They told me we were dropping off my stepdad at the airport and I agreed to tag along, but two hours later I asked what was going on. When they told me we were headed to Project Patch I punched the windows, kicked the back of the seats, screamed, and cried.

The reason my mom had decided to take me to Patch was because I needed help. I was depressed and unhappy, got mad easily and lashed out at others, and started sneaking out of the house at night. I even got into drugs and alcohol, including on school nights and in the middle of the day.

When we got to the ranch that summer, I was angry. I cried a lot and refused to talk to anyone. The Project Patch ranch is up in the mountains and I was a city girl, so I wasn't used to so much "outdoors" and I hated it.

But over time I began to learn a lot about myself; about my personality, how to control my anger, and how to be friendly. The first time I sat in the "hot seat" having to share about my experiences and feelings with my group, I was terrified. I tried to get up and leave, but that of course didn't work. I learned that running away or stuffing your issues away just leads to depression and loneliness. But most of all, I learned that getting help is not a bad thing. Everyone needs someone to talk to; we're all human and we all fall down.

▲ Life no longer looks dark and futureless for Jerika, who completed the Patch program two years ago.

When I completed my 14 months at Patch, getting that certificate of completion and getting back in the car to go home for good felt almost unreal. I kept asking myself, "Is this really happening?" It felt amazing to have come so far and accomplished so much. I had skills to manage my anger appropriately, I'd achieved my GED, and I was a happier person.

Being back in my home environment was hard. A lot of people in my town are so involved with drugs I found it incredibly challenging to stay clean when I had no job and nothing to do. It's been two years, and I'm still clean; I live with my sister in our own apartment and I'm enjoying the journey of life. I felt like I'd never get to this point in life, but I'm here— independent and happy.

I'm still not sure what I want long-term for my future; right now I'm just focused on working and learning how to budget so I can travel and enjoy life to the fullest. What I do know is that I'm forever grateful to Patch for giving me the tools I needed to be able to choose a better future for myself.

Cares & Prayers

Thank you for providing a perfect weekend and a beautiful setting during our time in Goldendale. Thank you for all you do for so many; you are a gift from God. – M.M.

We wish you God's blessings as you continue to help these children find their way in life and to know how much God loves them. – T.B.

You people and the Lord make such wonderful changes in the lives of those who come (or may be brought) to you. May He continue to bless in both Idaho & Goldendale. – L.C.

Thank you for giving our son a chance to lead a normal life. – L.R.

The serenity of the Family Center is phenomenal. I will definitely be back. The food – oh, the food! Words cannot express how awesome it was. Thank you! I know God has a plan for this facility. – D.S.

It was a wonderful weekend at the family center, and it was so nice to meet everyone there. Keep doing God's work; you are wonderful at it. – L.W.

It is exciting to hear about the young lives that are changed by all the love and concern shown them at the youth ranch. May God continue to bless you all as you minister for Him. – G.W.

My Everything

about the Patch program on their website, I knew Patch was exactly what Jerika needed.

Taking her to the ranch was extremely difficult emotionally. We packed her bags without her knowledge because she had expressly stated she did not want to participate in a residential treatment program, that she was perfectly happy living her current lifestyle, and had no intention of changing it.

When it was time to leave the ranch—without my daughter—I cried. I had never been away from Jerika for more than a week, and here I was leaving her for a year in the hands of people I had only met hours before. But I knew at home I was losing her to the world of drugs and gangs and she needed help I could not provide. I knew Patch could offer that help.

I visited Jerika about once every three months, and she had several homeleaves to visit me. We always had a lot of fun and heartfelt conversations as she shared what she was learning at Patch. I could see her carefully guarded walls coming down, and saw her turning into a bright, happy person again. She was excitedly looking for more positive outlets in her life, setting goals, and was working toward them; she even achieved her GED while she was at Patch. I was so proud of her!

After completing the program, Jerika told me she was grateful for her time at Patch, and the things she had learned there. She's been home for two years now, and not only does she still utilize every day the skills she learned at the ranch, she also continues to talk about her time there, hoping to help others who are going through a hard time.

Patch gave Jerika a feeling of self-worth. The program showed her that she could make goals and plans for her own future – and be in control of them. When she came home, she no longer acted as though she was at the mercy of the circumstances around her.

I was and continue to be amazed at the changes in Jerika's life. Project Patch accomplished all that I expected and more. She's positive, happy, upbeat, and loves life, and is now working. She has long-term goals to get married and build a future for herself. She looks forward to every day. And more than anything, she loves spending time with her family.

I'm so glad I sent Jerika to Project Patch, and am so thankful there was a program out there for her. My daughter means everything to me, and Patch gave her back to me.

Supporting Patch is Easy!

We are excited to introduce a new system for online donations and payments, making it even easier for you to support Project Patch. New features include saving your credit/debit card information for easy subsequent contributions, updating your contact information in our database, access to your receipt and past payment information, ability to easily and clearly choose where your contribution goes, ease of setting up recurring gifts or payments, and more. You can even sign up for any of our e-newsletters when you register (and edit your settings later if you wish). Additionally, making donations or payments online saves both us and you postage!

This system is safe and secure, as it is password protected and only the last four digits of your credit card number will be visible. Your information is stored in a world class data center monitored 24 hours a day, every day of the year, and our system is compliant with PCI, DSS, and SOC standards, as well as others.

Even if you don't make donations/payments online, you can still use your account on our website to look up past donations or payments, view and print receipts, and update your contact information.

To register for your free account, visit projectpatch.org/donate.

From the Board Chair

By Rick Claridge

According to Acts 20:35, Jesus said it is more blessed to give than to receive. And while you and I would both probably affirm that we agree with that principle, it's amazing how often I find myself (and perhaps you do, too) dreaming what I would do if only I had more. Probably most often my thoughts are not about helping others, but about helping myself. That's bothersome!

Naturally, most of the world thinks the same way. I'm always intrigued by the news media whenever the Powerball lottery jackpot gets above $300 million or so. The interviews, the hype, the dreaming. And while I've often heard, "think of the good I could do with $300 million," I don't ever recall reading a story of where that has happened. I have read several articles of how winning even just a few million dollars has ruined people's lives. I recall reading an article several years ago that noted about 30-40% of multi-million dollar winners are bankrupt within just a few years. Wow! And why? My guess it's because lottery winners are generally not good money managers. But possibly more importantly, lives are ruined because winners think only of themselves. They truly believe that money equals happiness but soon discover it is not true. As long as they have funds, they may have many friends and think they are happy. But as soon as the money is gone, they find they are lonely, discouraged, broke, and helpless.

So why am I writing about this? I'm writing it as a reminder to myself (and yes, you) that my most joyful and memorable experiences in life have come from giving to others. Giving my time, emotions, advice, resources, experience, trust, or sharing my God. Whenever I've given any of these, I am the one who has been blessed, gladdened, elated, and deeply satisfied.

Patch has many needs and God has many resources. My hope and prayer is that all who share, regardless of the method or manner, will be blessed with great joy and enduring satisfaction.

I was 15, thought I knew everything there was to know about driving, and I found myself sitting in a hot high school classroom taking drivers ed. The only thing I liked about the class was the few hours of driving and those few moments of terror as a classmate put us all in danger. The teacher would pump wildly at the extra break conveniently placed in the passenger compartment trying to hide his terror.

A key thing I learned in that class was that it is hard to look forward and look back at the same time. You can't drive safely while looking in the mirrors but you may get in danger if you don't look back occasionally. I learned that I should be checking my mirrors every 8-15 seconds.

Keeping safe means looking forward and knowing what is behind. At PATCH we spend a lot of time helping kids prepare for their future. We do a lot of looking forward and skill building. We also do quite a bit of looking back, specifically looking at things that shape and continue to impact us.

I played basketball with a great young man recently who is in the midst of his program at PATCH. He was bubbling over with plans for his future. As we talked, he shared why he ended up at PATCH and how he had hurt himself, friends and family. He was learning from his past and excited to move forward and make amends.

As I look back at this past year at PATCH, it has been very challenging. Resources have been stretched, key team members have transitioned, and the needs of families and teens have been heartbreaking. The future appears scary and uncertain and the past painful.

I feel a bit like Moses standing before the burning bush making excuses to God about why I don't feel qualified to do what he is asking. I am hearing the same question that God asked Moses, "What is in your hand?" (Exodus 4:2)

What is in my hand? An amazing team of staff, donors, and families that are willing to work together to change lives. Two amazing properties that God has given us to use in that transforming process. Proven programs that bring hope. God will take these things and perform the miracles.

I hope that as you read these stories and hear the challenge in this newsletter that you will also hear the call and look into your hands to see what God is calling you to use for His glory.

Income

Families continue to struggle to afford care for their kids. On faith we continue to help kids despite their family resources. We have witnessed miracles both in the kids' lives and in how God has faithfully sustained Project Patch for 29 years. We thank our monthly donors for the generosity and consistency in providing for the kids and families we serve. Our number of donors increased in 2012 and people are giving more. However, we have a continued pattern of reduction in estate giving as well as one time large gifts due events like selling a home, business, or stock.

Expenses

A key focus of 2012 was to reduce expenses without impacting the effectiveness of our services to teens and families. Cuts came in many forms and our staff made personal and professional sacrifices. The 2012 operating loss of $214,226 includes non-cash expenses of $168,452 (depreciation) as well as an impairment of $30,925 recorded on donated timeshares

Annual Giving

Annual giving touches every area of life at Project Patch. Without this vital resource, we would not be able to continue changing lives. Over 60 percent of our operating budget comes from individual donations; thank you from the bottom of our hearts to those who gave. We realize many of our supporters' gifts are made at great sacrifice. This annual report gratefully acknowledges your generosity. Your gifts and prayers continue to sustain and encourage us.

PATCH Snaps

▲ A church group works together on the low ropes course at the family center.

▲ There's no bad time to enjoy the peace and quiet at the ranch.

▲ After a rousing game of Frisbee on the lawn, the girls demonstrate that you're never too old to enjoy being silly.

Progress Report: Levi

Levi is a 15-year-old resident at the Patch youth ranch who, at the time this was written, is approaching his one-year mark in the program. He has made significant progress and was happy to share his experience with us.

Tell us about your life before Patch.

It was very rough. I learned some things about my family that I didn't know and it created a lot of anger and resentment toward my family. I frequently blew up, yelling and cussing at my mom, and communication with my dad was nonexistent. I continually refused to do things and disrespected a lot of people, especially my mom. I wasn't happy, and, in fact, I was quite depressed.

What's one thing you've really worked on here?

Isolation. I had a huge problem with that back home, and even when I first got here, I would go into some dark corner, hoping no one would see me. I just wanted to be alone. Over the year I've been here, it's gotten a lot better, and I actually enjoy socializing now.

Have you seen any change in yourself since arriving here?

Before Patch I didn't take orders well at all. I constantly questioned everything I was asked to do, and I utilized semantics to my advantage frequently. Someone would say, "Do the dishes," and I'd do it...but in two hours, because they hadn't specified a time frame for that particular chore. After working on that here at Patch, I have gotten pretty good at following instructions. I do what I'm asked right away, and follow one of the basic rules at Patch: Simple compliance.

What has been the hardest part of being at Patch?

Definitely being away from my family. I'm a very family-oriented guy; being able to constantly hear my family member's voices—especially my mom's—is a huge comfort for me. To be away from that specific comfort is very hard.

Tell us about the best part of being in the Patch program.

Oh, the staff! When you go through something as hard as going to Patch and being away from family and society for so long, you need something to make it a little easier. Patch has rules you may not like, but the staff always explain why the rules are there. They bring light to the depression we all kind of fall into when we first get here. They make it both fun and funny, while at the same time making sure we know we're cared for and loved.

What are some of your current goals?

Besides graduation, I have a few emotional goals. Those involve working on curbing my anger and forgiving family members who have hurt me in the past. Even though I've been here for almost a year I still struggle with the forgiveness piece. My other goals involve trying to get all of my paper assignments done so I can complete the program.

Share with us your plans and dreams for the future.

When I finish the Patch program I'll have three months of summer vacation, so I hope to get a job pretty quick and start saving money to buy a car. I'll return to school in the fall. My long-term goal is to get a doctorate in psychology so I can work in the behavioral analysis unit of the FBI. I love psychology, especially things like studying body language and behavior.

Right On Target by Jim Smith, family center director

Following every Family Experience weekend at the family center we ask for feedback from the families. We want to make sure we're giving them what they need and helping them as best we can. One recent family told us we hit all of their needs as a family and helped them pull together. They were a great family just looking to become even greater, and the environment and program at the Family Experience worked together to produce an outcome that allowed this family to communicate and work together in a more harmonious way. At the close of the weekend, they all felt good about what they had accomplished.

Rather than do the low ropes course in the rain that weekend, we decided to use our indoor Spider Web built for just such occasions. As they worked together to solve the element, there were snags along the way. When that happened, we stopped and talked about what was going on, using new skills. Family members learned new things about each other, and they solved the element in a grand way with Mom and Dad showing the way.

"Everything about the experience was right on target for us," shared the parents. The oldest daughter made a video for us about how much the weekend meant to her, and I wish I could share that with you here. It was inspirational to me.

Thank you all for praying for us and giving when you can so we can continue to help kids at the ranch and families here at the Family Life & Conference Center.

My Everything

EDITOR'S NOTE: There are two sides to every story. This is the story of Jerika's experience at Patch from her mom's perspective. To read the story in Jerika's words, go to page 1.

My daughter snuck out of the house at night, sometimes disappearing for days. She began dating a young man who sold drugs instead of going to school, and after three months, Jerika was skipping classes, too. She was rapidly spiraling in the direction of juvenile detention, and I knew I had to do something.

I asked friends for suggestions on how to intervene, but no one really had any answers for me. I was about to give up when my mom told me about Project Patch. After reading
